

Assigned Subjects For 2011

Assigned subjects are designed to challenge your photographic ability. The assigned subject must be the dominant feature in your picture. Search for the unusual. Remember that these are just suggestions. Use your own imagination!

January—

Doors & Doorknobs

an entrance or exit or the handle used to open or close it. New aged, old fashioned or simply functional, we use many of them every day, but how often do we see them??

March—Winter Wonderland

All the things most people hate about winter – snow, ice, cold – can make beautiful pictures. So, shoot the snow and ice, convey the cold, and don't forget about winter sports and outdoor activities. Anything that showcases the season is appropriate.

April—Stairways

a flight of stairs, the way up or down. Straight, curved or spiral each have a different look, but all have the same purpose.

May—Small Creatures

Any small, living being...hairy, creepy, crawly, flying or swimming. Kathy Keifer's presentation showed many ways this can be done indoors, but don't forget the studio of the great outdoors.

June—Parallel Lines

Side by side with the same distance continuously between them. Two lines that never touch.

September—Tattoos

An indelible pigment design on the skin. Do you have a secret tattoo?? Show it off!! If not, try Blues on the Mall for an environment rich in subjects.

October—Glorious Skies

Splendid, magnificent, delightful skies. It's all about the sky... a great sunrise or sunset, a unique cloud formation or just the beauty of the colors our sky can show.

November—Bridges

Anything providing a connection between different things - a foot bridge, car bridge, train bridge, ship's bridge, violin bridge or even the bridge of the nose!!

December—Random Ruins

Remains of a destroyed or wrecked building or object made without a conscious choice or method, aim or purpose. It could be something very large or very small, but it will most certainly have been abandoned at some time and probably no longer in use.
